Discussion: Using 911 data for crime prevention and control, and the prosecution of criminal offenses

Subsidiary Technical Group on Emergency and Security Systems (STG-ESS)
Inter-American Community of Emergency and Security Systems
Inter-American Community of Crime Analysts
Inter-American Community of Crime Observatories

Panelists' Profiles:

Andrea Aguirre
National Director of Data Analysis of the Integrated Security Service ISS ECU 911.

Previously, she served as a specialist of Evaluation and Economic Security at the Ministry of Interior, and as a Statistical and Territorial Information Analyst at the National Secretariat for Planning and Development.

She holds a PhD in Economic Sciences from Jean Monnet University of France. She holds a Master's in Game Theory, Experimental Economics and Applied Econometrics, and a degree in Economics and Management from the same University. She also holds a degree as an Engineer in Economic and Financial Sciences from the National Polytechnic School in Ecuador.

Juan Toapanta
Director of the Citizen Security Metropolitan Observatory. He specializes in sample design, statistical and econometric analysis.

He has held positions as Director of Studies at CEDATOS, Market Researcher at HABITUS, and has undertaken numerous activities as a consultant for ASTEC, SIDES, and other private institutions.

He holds a degree in Economics from the Central University of Ecuador. He holds an MBA with a specialization in General Management from the University of Rosario. He is currently pursuing a Master's in Public Policy Evaluation from the Institute of Higher National Studies (IAEN).

David Pérez Esparza
Head of Mexico's National Information Center, in the National Public Security System Executive Secretariat.

Mr. Pérez Esparza has been a Senior Consultant for the British Government in crime reduction. He has also collaborated with the Inter-American Development Bank (IADB) on the design and implementation of strategies in police issues. He was designated by the European Union as a Consultant and Special Rapporteur to Combat Organized Crime and Terrorism in Africa.

He graduated with honors from the Monterrey Institute of Technology and Higher Education with a degree in International Relations, and a minor in Strategic Foresight.

He holds a Master's in Crime Science with a major in Organized Crime, from the University College London (UCL) Jill Dando Institute of Security and Crime Science. He also holds a Master's in Public Policy from the Monterrey Institute of Technology, and a third Master's in Economics and Conflict Resolution from the University of Essex.

In 2019 he completed his PhD in Applied Sciences to Security at the University College London's (UCL) Faculty of Engineering.

Pablo di Clemente
Coordinator of the Municipal Center for Strategic Crime Analysis (CeMAED), which belongs to General Pueyrredon's Security Secretariat, Province of Buenos Aires, Argentina.

Member of the Latin American Institute for Security and Democracy's (ILSED) Local Governments and Security Policies Working Group.

He holds a degree in Economics from the National University of Mar del Plata. He is currently pursuing a diploma in Crime Analysis from the Latin-American Institute for Security and Democracy, and the University of Great Rosario.